

Association of Power Generation Companies (APGC)

APGC MEMBERSHIP

APGC is a membership organisation and considers membership applications from power generation companies licenses to generate power in the Nigerian Electricity Supply Industry who agrees to adhere to APGC's mission and APGC Constitution/Bylaws. Any such company or organisation wishing to become an APGC member may apply in writing to the Board at any time. The Board, or a committee authorised by the Board, reviews each application and, if appropriate, certifies that the applicant meets the qualifications for membership as outlined in the APC Constitution/Bylaws. The Board delegates the responsibility for reviewing applications for membership to an advisory committee. If an application is successful, the organisation applicant will enter into a membership agreement with APGC, paying dues and fees fixed by the Board within the schedule and conditions set by the association. In compliance with the APGC Constitution/Bylaws, APGC keeps a membership register which records the name, address, of each member organisation.

APGC's primary goals are to safeguard the interests of generation companies operating in Nigeria, and to ensure that the Nigerian Electricity Sector remains a healthy and vibrant market for continued operation and development. By joining APGC, Members benefit from APGC's unsurpassed knowledge base and convening power, extensive networking opportunities and access to high-level political, economic, and social decision making in the country.

Membership of the association of Power Generation Companies is a long-term investment. APGC's mission is to further and promote the interest of the GENCOS.

APGC's membership has numerous benefits such as providing information resources, contact and Networking opportunities, Help shape the dynamic electricity generation restructuring process that will dramatically impact the industry's ability to compete successfully.

Members are entitled to participate in all activities and to partake in the benefits accruable to all members as outlined below.

Benefits APGC offers to its members are:

- A common voice to government: Government is not able to listen to each and every Generation Company that comes to them for support or with concerns, let alone respond to those concerns. A focused group or unified voice such as APGC provides the platform where common issues can be brought to the attention of government.
- Receive regular updates on developments of interest in a concise, usable format along with alerts on fast-breaking action items.

- Attend regular membership meetings where the latest issues are discussed by experts in a setting that fosters frank and open discussion.
- Receive timely assistance with market research, especially in gathering industry statistics or government data.
- Network with power plant developers, marketers, and industry suppliers in a collegial environment, during regular APGC meetings open only to members.
- Identify affiliated professionals who can provide vital services, with confidence that they have an in-depth working knowledge of the competitive power supply industry.
- Provides a focal point for government to collect information that it needs to make informed decisions. In essence, the association becomes a sort of liaison with government — for the overall good of the industry.
- Provide information to its members in a variety of forms — from workshops and conferences to field days and focus group sessions.
- Printed materials like newsletters, brochures, and websites also provide valuable information.
- Dedicated employees who are tasked with helping members and their particular needs on a daily basis.
- Market development and research is one of the purposes of APGC. APGC conducts market research, or sponsor research which will benefit the entire association by providing information, answers, and solutions back to the group.
- Promotion, branding and visibility. APGC as the face and voice of the GenCos, aims to spend a great deal of effort in promoting the benefits, strengths, and values of the industry. APGC will achieve this aim through generation of promotional materials through newsletter, websites, leaflets etc. which will direct customers to its membership or the things that its membership offers. Marketing and communication are key components for organizations and provide significant value to members.
- Access to resources: APGC large membership base also gives it the opportunity to benefit from collective ordering and purchasing, allowing the association to provide certain common items to their membership at reduced costs — items such as shipping costs, packaging, or plant materials, for example.

APGC has been active in representing the interests of Generation Companies since its inception in the electricity industry before the Nigerian Electricity Regulatory Commission, the Federal Ministry of Power, the Senate and National Assembly, Central Bank of Nigeria, and other related agencies in the electricity value chain.

Thanks for identifying with the unbeatable team!!!
